

From the Editorial Suite

This 24th edition of our magazine with its cover story as the dynamics of terrorism, is poised to interrogate the numerous contested concepts of terrorism as well as trying to widen our scope of understanding regarding what terrorism truly is as well as open us up to the knowledge of the two categories of terrorists, which are those nine powerful countries that are in possession of nuclear weapons and those actors whose motivations are ideological, such as ISIS, ISWAP and Boko Haram.

Without this understanding of the bigger and the lesser terrorists, we can easily get our eyes fixated on the lesser ones and overlook the bigger ones, thereby mistaking evil for good and good for evil.

The interview granted to us by Retired Navy Commodore Kunle Olawunmi helps in the furtherance of our desire to enlighten our readers on the subject of terrorism.

The Commodore being highly resourceful has contributed in no small way from his wealth of experience to shed light on our dark spots and this to a large extent serves to emancipate our readers from the prison of ignorance and to ignite the needed fire to free ourselves from any kind of mental slavery.

Furthermore, we have the rare privilege of presenting to you in the center spread pages of this edition, a brief introduction of what the D-Day represents as well as some colorful pictures captured during the celebration of the 80th anniversary of the event which to most of the veterans that were honored can only be once in a lifetime experience. We have also packaged for you other educational articles from our highly resourceful writers and perusing through all the pages will definitely be to you a positive addition and serve to affirm the truism of the saying that "the pudding is in the eating."

We appreciate all our contributors as well as our readers, even as we solicit your support in the forms of advertisement and sponsors so that we can reach those who truly matter, nevertheless, it is from you to them.

Happy Reading!
